

The Formentera Department of Social Welfare has revisited a training programme that was first developed last year following the Covid-19 lockdown to equip monitors at the Escola d'Estiu (Summer School) with tools to detect possible difficulties and symptoms in children as a result of the public health crisis.

Participants were divided into two groups and schooled on indicators for possible difficulties, symptoms, lasting side effects and other situations worthy of expert attention. They also learned about protocols for referring specific cases to specialised services.
