

At 7.00pm on Friday 20 November, the Formentera Heritage Department invites islanders to the Centre d'Esports Nàutics (CENF) for a presentation of findings from the archaeological dig currently under way at "Cova 127" in La Mola.

Lead scientists Edgard Camarós and Pau Sureda will report on research performed at a site they say dates back the Bronze Age. The endeavour, which extends to a site in Es Cap de Barbaria, is part of a partnership between the Consell de Formentera and Cantabria's International Institute of Pre-historic Research (IIRPC).

Space is limited and reservations required (patrimoni@conselldeformentera.cat).
